Integrated Watershed Resource Strategy Place-based Planning in Oregon

A discussion session hosted by Tualatin River Watershed Council to promote understanding and planning for Oregon's in and out-of-stream needs.

The conversation will be about anticipating and planning for changes and challenges in water resources and needs in relation to climate change, changes in land use, and growth in population. The dialogue will be facilitated by the Oregon Water Resources staff.

The Discussion Paper is available on the Department's website at:

www.oregon.gov/owrd/LAW/docs/IWRS/2014_03_10_IWRS_Place_Based_Discussion_Paper_Final.pdf

An opportunity to exchange views about:

The Value of Place-Based Planning

What can place-based planning accomplish in Oregon that cannot already be accomplished today?

Setting Boundaries

How prescriptive should the state of Oregon be in organizing the borders and composition of groups?

Should the entire state be partitioned into state-defined regions, or should Oregon allow self-selection, similar to California?

Role of Local Partners & State Agencies

Who should act as the convenor?

What role should state agencies play?

Funding of Projects

What type of funding would be needed?

Should a properly formed planning unit and plan be a pre-requisite for state funding of water resources projects?
