7:20 PM	Presentation: Metro Parks and Nature Wildlife Monitoring Katy Weil has worked in wildlife conservation and environmental public policy for 36 years. She is currently serving as a senior science analyst within the Conservation Program for Oregon Metro Parks and Nature. She has been with Metro since 1998, and before that was the Oregon/Washington Coordinator for the avian conservation effort Partners in Flight as well as a program director for the Audubon Society of Portland. Prior to that Katy was a consultant for the United Nations Environment Programme, working with the Terrestrial Ecosystem and Programme Coordination Units. Oregon Metro's Conservation Program manages and restores over 16,000 acres of natural areas and parks within the three counties in the Willamette Valley. Metro's program focuses upon attaining a desired future condition for wetlands, uplands, and riverine habitats via removal of invasive vegetation, planting of native material, and long-term stewardship. Monitoring these sites for response to restoration and maintenance actions involves amphibian, avian, mammal, and some reptile survey.	Katy Weil, Metro
